Hiking Safety Tips

- Tell someone where you're going, when you plan to return, and then stick to your plan.
- Take plenty of water. When your water is halfway gone, your hike is halfway over.
- Keep an eye on the sky! Thunderheads may signal flash floods, even if it's not raining.
- If you get lost and find a road, stay on it.
- Get out of the sun when you're not moving: use available shade or make shade with blankets, tarps, umbrella, or coats.
- Bring a charged cell phone for emergencies.
- Wear a hat or other head covering. If necessary, improvise a head covering.
- Rest at least 10 minutes per hour, 30 minutes if you are not regularly physically active.

Trail Etiquette

• Hikers traveling uphill have the right-of-way.

- Please recreate responsibly and pack out what you pack in.
- Shortcutting switchbacks causes erosion.

TRAIL COURTESY

Sitting at the base of the majestic Santa Catalina Mountains, Catalina State Park is a haven for desert plants, wildlife, and archaeology. The 5,500 acres of foothills, canyons, and riverbeds invite camping, picnicking, and bird watching. Located in an Important Bird Area, more than 150 species of birds call the park home.

The park provides miles of hiking and biking trails that wind through the park and into the Coronado National Forest. The park also hosts an equestrian center where visitors can saddle up their horses in our staging area and take the trails on horseback. Trails in the national forest provide beautiful scenery to some of the area's most challenging hikes, so be sure to bring plenty of water before you start your journey.

Bring along your sense of adventure as you take in the beautiful desert mountain scenery.

Thank you for visiting!

Hiking Trails

50-year Trail: A 8.6-mile trail that begins at the park's equestrian center and follows a ridgetop for 2.6 miles on the northern half of the park. Continues another 5.2 miles on State Trust Land. A 2.2-mile trail link connects the 50-Year Trail with the Sutherland Trail. Plan four hours hiking each way.

Alamo Loop: A 3.2-mile loop with seasonal waterfalls and water crossings.

Birding Trail: A 1-mile loop that crosses a wash. Seasonal streamflow may occur. Hikers and bicycles only.

Bridle Trail: An easy 1.4-mile flat trail connecting the equestrian center to the Trailhead.

Canyon Loop Trail: A 2.3-mile loop that starts at the park trailhead on the Romero Canyon Trail and follows a crosscut to the Sutherland Trail. The trail crosses a wash with seasonal streamflow.

Cañada Del Oro (CDO) Ridge Trail: A 1.5 mile trail overlooking the CDO wash. Connects to the 50 -Year Trail to create a 3.2 mile loop.

Nature Trail: An easy 1-mile loop through lower foothills and desert scrubland. Hikers and bicvcles only.

Romero Canyon Trail: A moderately difficult hike that starts at the park trailhead and immediately crosses a wash with seasonal streamflow. Montrose Pools (usually dry) are within one mile of the trail. Romero Pools are within three miles of the trail after an elevation gain of 1000 ft. After Romero Pools, the trail enters unmaintained wilderness. Trail ends at Romero Pass where it intersects with the Mt. Lemmon Trail and West Fork Sabino Trail. Horses are not recommended and bicycles and dogs are not allowed past Montrose Pools.

Romero Ruins Interpretive Trail: A 0.8mile loop that starts at the parking lot on the main road near the Romero Ruins Ramada, Trail crosses a wash so seasonal streamflow crosses a seasonal streamflow. Hikers Only.

Sutherland Trail: A difficult 9.9-mile trail that climbs 700 ft, from the park into the Coronado National Forest, through Cargodera Canyon and intersects with the Mt. Lemmon Trail. A 2.2-mile trail link connects the 50-Year Trail with the Sutherland Trail. The trail crosses a wash so seasonal streamflow may occur.
