

When Water Hits Limestone

rain falls
and
rain falls

it hits carbon dioxide
drops become acidic

the acid is not strong
but it is strong enough

strong enough
to dissolve limestone

it hits the limestone
an ancient seabed

the drops will find a crack drop by drop

it will seep into the limestone tens of thousands of years later here we stand

By: Kent O.