

A Paradise in A Cave

In a world of black and white, a little girl dreams big. Let me tell you a story about little Louisia May Roberts. Louisia is unique. She dreams of places from caves and caverns to oceans and beaches. Pack your bags and get ready, because we are going for a ride with Louisia...

First, the world was dark. Then everything came to life. Lots of stalactites and stalagmites, hanging and standing all in a beautiful design of their own.

Everything glittered as I walked through the huge room. Bacon, popcorn, and soda straws hung from the ceiling of the cave. It was beautiful and I never wanted to leave. The next room I walked into was a big room with several benches in a row.

I sat down on one of the benches in the front and looked towards the big space with a column in front of me before lights filled the room. The music was beautiful and it slowly lulled me to sleep.

When I woke up I wasn't in the cave anymore, but I was laying in my bed at my house.

"Louisia, I have something to tell you. We are going on a fun trip to... drumroll please.. Kartchner Caverns! "
My mom says.

2 hours later, we arrive. We walk towards the entrance and when we enter, I am transported back into my dream.

The End
